Occasionally a wish list will expand its form and functional "must-haves" exponentially. A case in point: "My client and her husband are Cuban-American ... so a Mediterranean sweep to the exterior was pleasing to them," interior designer Nury Feria says. "They like Arte Nouveau as well, but with a contemporary line." And then there is the extended family. "The wife's parents live with them as well as two 20-something daughters. The husband loves comfortable and easy-care, the wife's tastes are more elegant ... even adventurous."

Added to the mélange was the challenge of an architect who had fallen ill, leaving to Feria the task of completing architectural and structural components from earlier visions. "It took two years and it wasn't always easy filling in for the RIGHT: Arte Nouveau? Moorish? Rather, a happy amalgam of centuries are found in the sprawling estate that houses three generations. Miami's old and new influences beckon from the street side.

"Yin & Yang" split-rattan armchairs by Kenneth Cobunpue grace the loggia, while poolside spa recliners from JANUS et Cie front a welcoming gazebo draped in white canvas by Sunbrella.
