"The challenge was to give warmth and femininity to a clean but masculine jewel box," Warner says of the house, which was designed in the early 2000s by architect Jim Jennings. For the landscaping, Warner kept it simple: "We did nothing more than set up areas for dining and entertaining" around the pool, which was also designed by Jennings. The patio seating is by Janus et Cie, and the tile floor is travertine. Warner placed a Galanter & Jones heated love seat by the door to entice party guests "to spill out onto the patio on cool evenings."
