Garden Variety

Interior designer Simon Paul Scott launched his chinoiserie-driven product line, Jardins en Fleur, in 2008 to bring a little more whimsy to his clients' homes—but he fast became a favorite of his contemporaries, including Michael Smith, Celerie Kemble and Charlotte Moss. The collection includes furniture, lamps and hand-painted silks, but it's his carved alabaster garden stools that are the latest hit. Available in Asian, Moorish and floral patterns, like the new Acanthus, the customizable stools are equally at home inside and out. *Price upon request, David Sutherland, 8687 Melrose Ave., Ste. Take Cover

Frustrated with the lack of stylish eco-friendly table coverings on the market, La Jolla-based designer Brenda Sacks decided to take matters into her own hands.

BottleCloth, her new line of sustainable tablecloths, uses highly durable, soft, spill-resistant fabric that happens to be made from recycled plastic bottles.

The chic, all-weather collection consists of nine designs—with bold brushstrokes, breezy patterns and playful script sayings—in five different colorways. Look out for placemats and runners mid-May and pillow covers and totes this summer.

What are you seeing as the major trends in outdoor decor?

"I'm known for my colorful, water-wise plant palette, accents and accessories—vertical gardens, angular glazed pots and dining sets with bold colors. My most popular request is fireside entertaining—I've incorporated fire bowls into a number of my designs and people absolutely love them."
