1. Otto Tiles & Design Marble Mosaic

Designed in the UK and handcrafted in Turkey from Italian and Turkish marble, the new Mosaic Marble tiles from Otto Tiles & Design are set on a flexible mesh backing for easy installation. The classically shaped, solid stone, fish scale mosaic design – also known as a fan or scallop shape – creates a distinctive and unique floor pattern and is available in a single white colour option for a neutral backdrop, or in a traditional pairing of natural marble tones. The new additions are suitable for a wide range of installations, both indoor and outdoor, while bespoke alterations and colour options are also available on request for the contract market.

2. Topfloor by Esti Matrix

Topfloor by Esti, a luxury rug and carpet atelier based at Design Centre Chelsea Harbour in London, bridges the gap between floorcoverings and artwork; its distinctive designs combine premium materials and craftsmanship with innovative techniques to create statement pieces. The rug company's latest project, Matrix, is a partnership with Italian artist Gianluca Franzese. Based on Franzese's artwork, the collection comprises a series of limited edition hand-knotted and hand-tufted pieces. According to Topfloor founder Esti Barnes, transposing Franzese's geometric designs onto rugs has been "the most challenging, yet rewarding collaboration so far".

3. Malmo Senses

The Senses multi-width luxury vinyl tile collection by Malmo features the latest registered and embossed technology, which sees the printed design mirror surface textures to achieve the look and feel of real woodgrain. As such, the visual patterns of reclaimed flooring can be applied to the Brada designs from the range. Available in two colourways – Brada Storm and Brada Chestnut – the tiles replicate the aesthetic using random plank widths and lengths, yet offer all the convenience of easy-to-fit rigid vinyl flooring in a single plank. Malmo's multi-layer construction adds to the dimension stability and performance of the flooring too, making it durable and hardwearing.
