HOSPITALITY EXPERIENCE & DESIGN

1. Skargaarden Böste

During Stockholm Furniture Fair, Swedish outdoor furniture producer Skargaarden unveiled Böste – a Scandinavian interpretation of Thomas Lee’s iconic Westport Chair, designed by Stefan Borselius and named after his hometown in southern Sweden. The brilliance of the Westport’s original design lies in the angles from the seat to the back and from the legs to the seat. Borselius’ interpretation is a durable, carefully processed version in powder-coated stainless steel and FSC teak, which can be left outside year-round. The armchair has rounded edges and soft shapes, and over the years the surface will acquire a silver-grey patina.

2. Janus et Cie Rondo

Janus et Cie has taken inspiration from classic, barrel-back chairs and Mid-Century silhouettes to create Rondo. The new seating collection launches with five pieces: an armchair, barstool with arms, counter stool with arms, lounge chair and ottoman. Rondo’s curved backs cradle the body for added comfort while tapered, conical legs maintain clean, spare lines for a sense of minimalism and lightness. Handwoven seats and backs in an open, geometric pattern invite a play of shadow and light. Rondo’s powder-coated aluminium frames are available in two finishes – Graphite/Shale and Talc/Fossil – with a combination of two ropes in complementary tones.

3. Glatz Twist

The flat parasol roof, handy crank and ergonomic swivel mechanism of the Twist parasol reflect Glatz’s ambition to create sustainable inventions. Twist is easy and convenient to open at hip height with just a few crank rotations. It also offers stepless tilting and can be rotated 360° using the practical clamping lever. Together with the flat parasol roof, the white and anthracite powder-coated aluminium frame and ribs create a modern, floating look. The canopy is also self-tensioning thanks to its flexible ends, while the mast features an internal steel pipe for which a lower pole is available, so the parasol height can be adjusted to ensure the right amount of shade.
