Colors in the main living area reflect the home's coastal locale. Opposite page, clockwise from top left: In the hallway, a painting of a fishing pier creates the appearance of a window view. Three walls of windows and French doors keep the living spaces connected to the outdoors. The X-frame kitchen island made from knotty pine repeats the design of the dining table.

Above and left: The kitchen's large island accommodates bar seating along one side and a prep sink along the other. Horizontal wood paneling pairs with a marble backsplash and white cracked-finished porcelain counters. Below: The sheltered back porch creates a gracious interchange with the freestanding carriage house. Opposite page, top to bottom: In the more casual family room, a deep sectional anchors one corner, while a pair of swivel chairs and matching ottomans round out the seating arrangement. The elliptical archway that frames the bar is a unifying theme throughout the house.
