THE SANTA BARBARA DESIGN HOUSE AND GARDENS SHOWCASES A RELAXED CALIFORNIA ATTITUDE

WRITTEN BY AMY ELBERT

PHOTOGRAPHY BY DOMINIQUE VORILLON PRODUCED BY AMY ELBERT AND JO ANN McVICKER

Drifts of morning fog often hover above the housetops in quiet Montecito, California. As the clouds gradually lift over the foothills, the allure of Southern California is palpable: warm sunshine, the turquoise Pacific Ocean, fragrant fruit orchards, and streets lined with giant eucalyptus trees. In this ideal setting, long-time Montecito residents and developers Joanie and Dennis Franz partnered with the Santa Barbara Junior League to create the 2012 Santa Barbara Design House and Gardens.

When Joanie and Dennis (you'll remember him as detective Andy Sipowicz in the TV series NYPD Blue) bought the rundown residence, the best it had to offer was its location: 1.6 acres with a backdrop of the Sierra Madre foothills and distant views of the ocean.

Teaming up with architect Peter Becker, builder Phillip Penestri, and landscape architect Robert Adams, the Franzes rebuilt the house into a 6,000-square-foot home with six bedrooms, a deep front porch, loggia, swimming pool, and separate cabana guesthouse. Southern California designers took over the interiors, creating spaces rooted in traditional style but with a definite casual beach beat. Here's a preview of some of the rooms in the showhouse, which is open for tours September 13 through October 7.

Mary McDonald
Family Room + Kitchen

“Santa Barbara is a bit woody and a bit beachy,” says designer Mary McDonald, “so I tried to tie together the sandy taupe elements and those delicious water blues of the beach.” The sofa, two leather chairs, and the wall color in the family room were drawn from blues—steely gray to ocean teal—in the kilim rug in front of the fireplace. “Even though I am known for color, this is a really subtle artistic use of it that’s very serene,” she says. The blues are joined by driftwood and stone hues in furniture finishes and accessories (wicker chairs, rustic tables, and handmade pottery) that suggest a casual, artistic, and nature-loving lifestyle.

“Accessories are rather eclectic, as if someone has been collecting. Nothing is staid or formal.” The ivory kitchen is warmed by a blue island and two types of marble, one with gray veining and one with taupe hues. Brass fixtures add sparkle and pop. (marymcdonald.com)

Mary McDonald Loggia Dining + Seating

McDonald's driftwood color story continues on the loggia, with all-weather wicker seating pieces that complement the stone of the outdoor fireplace. "I stepped it up a little by adding crisp white pillows on the furniture, so things seem more modern and contemporary," explains the designer. An indoor-outdoor rug anchors the seating area, and on the other end of the loggia, two square tables on pedestal bases are pushed together to form the dining table. Folding glass doors with virtually no threshold (no tripping!) link the interiors with the columned loggia, which spans nearly one entire side of the house.

Steve Weinstock Powder Room

Artist Steve Weinstock creates one-of-a-kind sinks, mirrors, and light fixtures by fusing ground metals between layers of glass. "The predominant material inside the glass is copper, which gives us a range of earthy colors from deep red to salmony pink and ambers," he says. Other oxides add touches of blue and green. Weinstock makes the glass objects at his Los Angeles-based Alchemy Glass & Light. (alchemyglass.com) ▶
