OUTDOOR DINING CHAIRS

Just because a piece of furniture has to stand up to the sun, wind, and rain doesn't mean it must sacrifice any grace or beauty in the process. Why shouldn't you have a dining chair for the porch or patio that you would also happily use indoors?

We gathered together the best examples we could find, in a slew of materials ranging from teak to anodized aluminum. Looking for something streamlined and angular? Check. Lilted and romantic? We've got you covered. All you need to add is some balmy spring air.

Painted chairs pair well with natural finishes on a porch by David Easton. OPENING PAGE: John Saladino used rattan chairs on a leafy California terrace.
